HOPI HOMECOMING

Miles fry under our wheels and slough off. The drought is worse than I thought. Crops are gatherings of desiccated crones leaning on each other rattling last wishes. The racing shadow in the dry washes and high basalt roadcuts is my bus from Cleveland.

I can participate in its cubist image by holding magazines up to the window though no one else would notice the shade of difference I make in one small square.
Out there the shadow-bus is being its true self, compressing its length, recoiling from desert and heat, rising taller to look back for its lake.

Blue Corn would smile at the analogy-- that smile that begins at the left of her mouth and leaves a luminous aura after the rest of her face has forgotten it.
Odds are she'll be at the bus stop with the want ads and the appaloosa instead of the pickup. Hell, a horse'll feel good between my legs after steel chairs and seminar stools. The horse and I will be in synch before we pass First Mesa.

But soon I must interface with my Badger Clan.
I'm like this bus-- speeding a new highway still sticky-- a late model vehicle of alloy containing other lives besides. Which one am I? Is there a spirit of me beyond the smoky abstraction the sun reveals?

Blue Corn, my love, you write happy from your mother's Bear Clan.
You too are no longer programmed by Kachinas. When you dance I know your eyes are uncloudy beneath the mask.
Most of you belongs to me but the foot, the drum, are your own.

Can you make any part of me whole?
